MY POLITICAL PATIENT.

INCIDENT IN THE LIFE OF A RUSSIAN SPY.

"Millner," said my fellow Æsculapius, Zaninski, shaking the feathery flakes of snow from his wolf-skin pelisse, as he walked into my apartments at old Gregory's hotel meuble in English Quay, St. Petersburg, "I have something of importance to propose to you."

I could not refrain from smiling at his grave exordium, though the speaker's manner and tone, were more serious than usual. Zaninski was a year or two older than myself, and ranked immediately above myself, Samuel Millner, F. R. S., on the medical staff of the Imperial Foundling Hospital. I had been for the last fourteen months an assistant surgeon at that hospital, and lately sent in my resignation. Indeed, I was heartily tired of Russia, stoves, spies, snow, the dust and gnats in summer, the enormous expenses of living, and the influence which a government at once cruel and corrupt diffused though every stratum of society. Zaninski, a Pole, as his name implies, was one of the few persons in St. Petersburg for whom I entertained a regard, and he and I were on a footing of friendly intimacy, but what to make of this new form of address I knew not.

To own the truth, I was sitting, sick at heart, turning over old letters and memorials of bygone days, and remembering, with a bitterness of spirit that was not, I dare say, very reasonable, how my early plans and high hopes had been blighted and thwarted by the course of events. Two years had I been in Russia, having come out as medical attendant to a sickly boy of large property, who died within a few months of his exchanging the warm air of the south of Europe for the damp chill of the Finland marshes. Upon his death I was to accept the humble office of assistant surgeon to the hospital I have named. And now I was giving up my post, despairing of the promotion which skill could not obtain for a friendless stranger, too poor to bribe, and without powerful interest, and having experinced the disgust and lassitude which seldom failed to accompany a thankless task.—Without any desire to boast, I may say, that during my stay at St. Petersburg, I had effected some useful improvements in the institution to which I was attached. A memorial of my drawing up, pointing out many petty abuses and much peculation, which I found existed the hospital, had reached the Emperor's own hands, and led to some salutary alterations. The high mortality among the helpless inmates had been sensibly reduced. But, by my interference I had made many enemies among those in authority, and it had been decided to get rid of the inconvenient eye-witness, if annoyance and official persecution could avail. These had availed, and I resigned my post.

Zaninski had come to propose that I should accept the post of medical adviser to an elderly Russian of rank, who had been ordered to Pisa for his health, and whose physicians had forbidden him to undertake a sea voyage. Winter had set in early, and a plentiful fall of snow had been succeeded by an immense frost, so that the highways admitted of the most rapid and easy locomotion, and would continue to do so until fresh snowstorms, or a warm wind, should injure the hard surface.

My friend hastily ran over the various advantages of the opportunity that now presented itself. General the Baron Sotloff was a sad sufferer from various complaints, and his temper was none of the best; but he was rich and liberal, and the salary was a handsome one. The baron was a widower, but his charming daughter, who was thoroughly devoted to him, and nursed him with the most affectionate patience, did the honors of his house to perfection. The baron himself, though very ill, just then, having incautiously returned to Russia from a long residence in the milder climate of the south, and always liable to attacks of gout or asthma—was an accomplished personage, who had spent much of his life in foreign courts, and had a fund of anecdote and information that would surprise me.

At this point I interrupted Zaninski by saying that there were, indeed, two features of the case which surprised me; one of which was, that a sick person should venture on a journey in that piercing cold, and through the comfortless interior of Russia; while the other was that an obscure individual like myself should have been selected as his medical attendant.

I thought at first that Zaninski looked a little disconcerted, but if so, his laugh was frank and hearty, as he replied—

"Needs must my dear colleague, when the devil drives, and General Sotloff may as well die on the road as to stay here to perish by inches. And, as for the danger of a journey in the dry cold of winter, believe me, it is much less than you would suppose. And if you won't believe me, at least—heretic that you are—respect the opinion of those grave and reverend seniors of our profession, Dr. Sergius, Dr. Paniatin, and your compatriot, Dr. Phipson. All of these physicians are agreed that M. Sotloff's only chance is in a speedy departure. And as for his choosing yourself, mon ami, you are better known by repute than your modesty is willing to admit. More than one friend has told the general of your cleverness, and he has a prejudice in favor of your countrymen."

Before the interview came to an end I had agreed to accept the proposition, and to devote such professional skill as I possessed to the baron's service. In coming to this decision, I was not entirely influenced by the amount of the salary, though that was far higher than any remuneration which I had previously received for duties much more arduous. But it was some vague idea of settling in medical practice in some pleasant Italian city, when the baron's health should no longer require my care, that prompted me to close with the offer.

What Zaninski said in praise of the beauty and merits of Mademoiselle Sotloff did not impress me much. I had been allowed the entré of a few aristocratic drawing-rooms in St. Petersburg, and my own experiences had not made me a believer in Muscovite good looks or Muscovite amiability. Those pale, sallow belles of the Russian salons, engrafting French millinery and French graces on the hard Tartar nature, were by no means to my taste, and I had often sighed as I remembered the simple virtues of my countrywomen, never so sharply contrasted as by the tone of St. Petersburg society. I therefore made up my mind that Zaninski's commendation of the young lady's charms were mere compliments, probably due to the gratitude for some past kindness rendered by the general—once, I gathered from my friend's hints, marshal of the nobility of some government in Great Russia—to his father or himself.

Baron Sotloff's residence was at Moscow, and as the railway had recently been opened between the Holy City and the modern capital, I had the prospect of a rapid and easy journey thither as the system of police would permit.

The Czar Nicholas, as is well known, had never thoroughly approved of the introduction of railways, levelling and revolutionary contrivances borrowed from the restless west; and he had insisted that the speed of transit and the number of departures from the terminus at either end should be reduced to the minimum.

Zaninski and I drove down together to the station, after a hurried breakfast, and through the gloom of the wintry morning. I had never guessed how thoughtful and painstaking a friend my colleague would turn out as the hour of our separation drew near. I had been accustomed to look on Zaninski as a gay, good-hearted fellow, not overburdened with brass, and certainly averse to trouble. Indeed, the Pole had always deferred to my judgment in a manner flattering to a young man, and had frankly admitted my superiority in worldly knowledge; but I had never thought that my companion's regard for me was such as to induce him, not only to procure me the office of household surgeon to my new patient, but to render every assistance in his power towards promoting my comfort on the journey, sparing no trouble to smooth the way of my departure. It was Zaninski who busied himself about my outfit, pointing out the shops where the best and cheapest furs, sheepskin boots, and other necessaries of travel were to be procured. Above all, it was Zaninski who took upon himself the whole irksome task of getting my "permit of residence" exchanged for passport duly visé by the suspicious authorities, who were notorious for the long delays, the tvexaious queries, and the objections only to be removed by bribes, that they interspersed between foreigners and a voyage In Holy Russia.

And I, in my simplicity—but no matter!—The sequel will sufficiently explain Zaninski's extraordinary interest in my getting clear off from the Czar's realms without let or hindrance.

The two hours which routine imposed as a probation for all intending travelers were about the most tedious I ever remember to have spent.—Luggage was vigorously examined, trunks and valises were unlocked, searched and locked again, only to be opened a second and a third time for the satisfaction of some superior officer of the police, who tapped each box in quest of a false bottom, explored every portmanteau for contraband stores behind the lining, and suspected every desk of being replete with secret drawers full of treasonable correspondence. Each of these troublesome zealots had to be fed on a scale proportioned to his rank, and the clinking of silver and the rustling of notes were perpetual.

To one accustomed at home to take his ticket and jump into a railway carriage, without leave or license from any authority, all this was peculiarly annoying. But a countryman of my own, long settled at St. Petersburg, who was going on business to Moscow, and with whom I had some slight acquaintance, told me that the police were more on the alert than usual, owing to a detected conspiracy for exciting a wide-spread revolt, not only in Poland, but in the partially Russianised provinces of Lithuania and Podolia.

"A mere fiasco—a wretched breakdown, as every attempt of the sort has proved since I have been in the country," said Mr. Jennings, who was, like most of the merchant princes established at St. Petersburg, a firm believer in the invincibility of the Czar's government, at least as against domestic foes; "but it gives these rogues in uniform an excuse for extra strictness. I believe myself that the emperor and ministers have known of the plot and its collapse for some weeks past, but the newspapers have only just been allowed to mention it. There is a hot search after the ringleeders, poor wretches, for the apprehension of the chief of whom high rewards are offered; he is a Pole, of course, one Saminski—eh? another fellow to look at our passports? then we shall each be a rouble poorer," said the merchant, laughing.

I had fancied—it must have surely been fancey—that Zaninski, whose arm was linked in mine, winced at the mention of his countryman's name

Two or three travelers who were sparing of their coin, or whose papers were really unsatisfactory, were sent ignominously back to the city, but the rest of us passed scathelessly through the ordeal. By my Polish colleague's advice, I had been liberal, but not lavish enough excite notice, in my administering of silver sops to the Cerberi of office; and my bran-new passport with its spread eagles and high and mighty signatures, to whose ink the sand of the imperial bureau yet adhered, defied suspicion. So at last I wrung Zaninski's hand as I said farewell, and ascended the steps of a first class carriage.

Mr. Jennings was my companion, and the remaining seats, save one, were filled by Russian merchants of the higher guilds, going south to attend a winter market at Moscow. My attention was for a few moments directed to this vacant seat, which the guard chose—why, I could not guess—to keep empty.

"So you are going to have a look at Moscow in its winter costume, doctor? Not afraid of frostbite, eh!" said Mr. Jennings, and as I had no reason for keeping my engagement secret, I told him briefly what my errand was.

"Sotloff!" said the merchant, "I don't know the name. Sotloff! Well, well, no man can have the Russian peerage at his fingers' ends, as some of our worthies at home have the British by heart. But I have been twenty years in St. Petersburg society, and have a head roll of the names of their nobility in my memory, where I dare say might have been stored something more useful—but Sotloff! Of what local government did you say he had been made marshal? That might might give me a clue."

"I have not the least idea, said I, smiling; and just then the slow moving train stopped at a little station, and the guard ushered in a young officer, whose uniform was visible as his cloak of costly sables was accidentally opened on taking his place. This new comer bowed and smiled to us with great politeness, as foreign etiquette demands; but I did not much like the expression of the long, dark Mongolian eyes, cunning and restless, that looked forth from a flat, pale face, to which waxed moustaches, and hair daintily arranged beneath the braided forage cap, gave an air of dandyism. I never before saw a head that so reminded me of that of a serpent, and it was with instinctive repugnance that I turned away from the elegant stranger. Mr. Jennings seemed to be of much the same opinion, for he pencilled something on a card, and handed the card to me. I read as follows:

"Depend upon it, that is thn person the vacant seat was kept for. I know Russia. Give him—our neighbor—a wide berth, but don't offend him. A wink is as good, &c."

I nodded to Mr. Jennings, and thrust the card into my waistcoat pocket. The merchant's well-meant warning was not lost upon me. Altho' my experience of Russian affairs was trivial when compared with his, I knew that social life in Muscovy was invested by spies in every grade and garb, and that the unscrulous police Prefect of St. Petersburg had his emissaries in market, camp, and ball-room; some in the simple black of the Tchinn, to whom civil employment belonged, others in the greasy sheepskins of the mujik, and not a few in the martial guise, epauletted, and sparkling with cross star of some desecrated order of chivalry. Strickly speaking, there was no reason why I should have feared the prying curiosity of any mouchard in the Czar's pay. I had nothing to conceal. My errand was a lawful and harmless one. The most censorious of despots could hardly have cavilled at the common-place undertaking in which I was engaged. And yet so innate is a freeman's abhorrence for treachery and deceit in any shape that I shrank from the advances of our opposite neighbor as if he had been plague-stricken.

The officer, who persisted for some time in offering petty civilities to Mr. Jennings and myself, and whose frequent attempts to draw one or the other of us into an animated conversation were thwarted in every instance, was not slow in perceiving the aversion which prudence compelled us to hide under a mask of polite coolness. He gradually grew silent, and his urbane smile changed to a cold and sneering expression which sat more naturally on his thin lips than the former, while he wrapped his cloak more closely around him, and seemed to fall into a dozing condition of repose. His presence acted as a restraint upon our further discourse, but once or twice I heard Mr. Jennings mutter to himself the name of "Sotloff" unconsciously, perhaps, and I guessed that he was still cudgeling his memory for the antecedents of my distinguished patient. And once, when the word was ejaculated with more than usual distinctness, I thought I saw the Russian opposite start forward; but if so, the motion was hardly perceptible, and his pale face showed no signs of intelligence.

Nothing worthy of remembrance occurred during the rest of the journey. We reached Moscow in due course, and there the motley population of the train dispersed, Mr. Jennings parting with a hearty pressure of the hand, and a kind wish that I might have "good luck and a pleasant trip," and the officer giving me a glance as he left the station, that haunted me for a time in spite of my efforts to ridicule the impression it had produced. It was not a look of anger, scorn, or derision; but it seemed to threaten, as the eye of a venemous reptile might threaten the prey which it had already gloated in prospect. If ever a glance spoke, that one was eloquent of future evil.

DON'T LIKE FREMONT.—The Stockton Independent has about the same amount of regard for John Charles Fremont that Mephistopheles has for holy water. Hear him:

His insolent letter of acceptance has placed a river as flaming and impassable as the Styx between himself and all true patriots. He, the weak, extravagant fool, who wasted every month on fine feathers and body guards more than the yearly wages of the President, to prate of public extravagance in the Administration! is simply the whine of an idiot, and will be so universally regarded. He, who never for a month at a stretch could live in harmony with his brothers in the army or his own party in politics, is a beautiful duck to talk of Americanizing the continent and wielding all antagonisms into one harmonious whole. He has neither the temper nor the breadth of intellect to fit him as President of a republic as large as Hayti.—He is essentially a factionist—of the dark Robespierean sort, who would lend himself to any work of public destruction in order to achieve personal distinction. The men of this nation understand and quietly ostracise him and his kind. When the men cast him off, the poor creature essays to be a leader among garrulous old women. With such a staff and Kitchen Cabinet he assails the Administration and distributes the dregs and squeezings of his shallow brain throughout the land for mischief. He will not get a corporal's guard vote in any State of the Union; and they who do support him are, in our opinion, not a whit wiser or better than that other sort of fanatics and traitors who support Jeff. Davis. Indeed the Davis set have the advantage in not following a positive fool as well as a man of dark and damning ambition.

DEATH OF THE DUKE OF MALAKOFF.—The latest news by telegraph reports the death of the eminent French General, Amable Jean Jacques Pelissier, Duke of Malakoff and Marshal of France under the present regime. He was born at Maromme, near Rouen, November 6, 1794. He served in Spain, Greece, and, in 1830, took part in the French expedition against Algeria. His chief exploit while there, and one that filled the civilized world with horror, was the suffocation of nearly six hundred defenceless Arabs in a cave. From Algeria he went to the Crimea as second in command to General Canrobert, whom he soon succeded in the command in chief, and retained it till the close of the war. His title was given him on account of having captured a Russian fortification of that name. He was in 1858, Minister to England from the French Court, replacing Count Persigny. In addition to his other honors, Queen Victoria conferred upon him the honorary grand cross of the Order of the Bath. He was a good General and fair diplomat, with a conscience located in his stomach.—Call.

THE DEATH OF GENERAL SEDGWICK.—A Washington correspondent gives the following particulars relating to the death of the heroic Sedgwick:

"I regret to announce the death of so valuable and efficient an officer as General Sedgwick. He was shot through the head this morning, while superintending the mounting of some heavy guns in an angle the men had just prepared. There was no skirmishing at the time, but an occasional sharp-shooter sent a bullet in that direction, which caused the cannonier to wince and dodge. General Sedgwick was near by, with some of his staff, and twitted the man about his nervousness. 'Poh! man,' he said, 'they can't hit an elephant at that distance.'—Immediately after the ball struck him, and the blood began to ooze from his nostrils. He smiled serenely, and fell dead in the arms of his Assistant Adjutant-General."

"WHAT is the use of a seat of war to a standing army?

FIGHT WITH AN IRON-CLAD.

A correspondent of the Newark Advertiser, writing from on board United States gunboat Miami, off mouth Roanoke river, May 6th, gives the following graphic description of a fierce conflict between our fleet and the rebel ram Albemarle:

"We have just passed through the second engagement with that ugly little ram, the Albemarle. Yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock, the ram, consorted by the steamer Cotton Planter and the Bombshell, which last they sunk at the attack on Plymouth and afterwards raised, made its appearance at the mouth of the river. We retreated slowly and then followed. Captain French sent the steamer Massasoit ahead to inform the remainder of the fleet.

At four o'clock they came in sight, running up at full speed. When the rebel fleet saw our reinforcements they tried to back out; but it was no go, as some of our vessels can steam eighteen knots, while the ram can make but eight or nine. At half-past four we fired the first gun—our 100-pounder rifle. That was the signal for the commencement of a most furious cannonading, which lasted over three hours.—The fleet took a position describing a circle, with the ram in the center. In the meantime the Cotton Planter had fled, and by her superior sailing qualities escaped. The Bombshell we captured. She was crowded with sharp-shooters.

The gunboat Sassacus steamed full speed right into the ram, at the same time giving her a broadside; but without the least effect. The whole fleet then sailed slowly round the ram, each boat as it passed giving her a broadside, which made the iron fly from her side and riddled her smokestack. This seemed to 'rile' her some, for she then, for the first time, showed her teeth, and began to act on the defensive. She made directly for the Miami, and when she was about ten yards off, let fly at us with Whitworth rifles. One shell went through our smoke-stack, just above the men's heads; and the other went in the captain's cabin and exploded there, tearing everything in the vicinity to pieces, and starting the decks above. A large piece of the shell went through the opposite side, making a hole clear through the ship.

Mr. Hackett, our Paymaster, was lying on a sofa in the cabin at the time, and, wonderful to say, was not hurt in the least, although the sofa was turned over on him, and he was covered with a pile of glass, books, clothes, pieces of wood and broken furniture, and almost suffocated by the dust and smoke with which the cabin was filled. We were also struck by a shell, which burst in the wheelhouse and shattered our signal lamps, but did no other damage. A thirty-eight pound solid shot went through our second cutter, which hung alongside on its davits, and there is nothing left of our 'dingy' but the keel and ribs. Strange as it may seem, not a man on our vessel was hurt.

The Sassacus got a shell in her boilers, which killed three and wounded six. The Melabasset had her deck swept by a shot, which took both legs off three men, one of whom has since died, and the others are not expected to live. We have not yet heard whether any others in the fleet were hurt.

The Miami fired over one hundred and seventeen times, and struck the ram over eighty times. We put one shot right into one of her ports, and dismounted a gun. The firing was kept up till after dark; and during the night the ram got away up the river. We all think that two hours more of daylight would have made her ours.

We take from the Calaveras Chronicle the following article relative to the Presidential campaign:

THE CANDIDATES.—The results of the National Convention held at Baltimore are gratifying to every Union man in the country. Four years ago there were two candidates in the field for the Presidency, who, so far as the Union question was concerned, were equally positive in their attachment to the Constitution and the Union. The Republican Party elected their candidate to the chief magistracy, and had those States which have since rebelled remained true to the country at this time, those who voted for the lamented Douglas would have supposed the present candidate for a re-election; but since the issue has become a question of loyalty to the Government on one side, and disloyalty on the other, the great mass of those who supported the Little Giant are now among the foremost of Mr. Lincoln's supporters. In California particularly there can be no neutral ground. The secession element has now the control of what is left of the Democratic party; and those who are in favor of establishing free institutions and restoring the Union must arrange themselves under the banners of the Union Party and vote for the re-election of the present National executive. Mr. Lincoln's course is approved by all well wishers of good government. He has been cautious and conservative, never getting in advance of public opinion; but has so timed his official acts that they seemed to give expression to the sentiments of the people, at the same time conveying his own political views. He has so imbedded himself in the heart of his countrymen, that his being the next President is as certain, as that he lives to be inaugurated. Andy Johnson of Tennessee during the last presidential contest was a Breckenridge democrat but never a secessionist, and when the flag was fired upon at Sumpter came out boldly and squarely for the Government. His course since is a sufficient guaranty that he will maintain the Union of these States, and do all in his power to preserve the integrity of the Country. With such leaders the party is certain of success. Before their term expires we sincerely hope that the country will be at peace and that our sister republics will be freed from foreign dominion, so that hencetorward through all coming time, the continent of America may be governed by freemen, and become the asylum of the oppressed and persecuted.

GOOD IT TRUE.—It is rumored on the streets of San Francisco that Chipman, the "martyr," and W. D. Sawyer, late a Copperhead in this county, and three-eight others of the same political proclivities have joined the Dashaways, being determined to pay no tribute to the 'Lincoln despotism' in the shape of an increased tax on whisky.

So says the Petaluma argus.

Under the mileage system for members of Congress, Winter Davis, who lives nearest the Capital, receives thirty-two dollars, and William H. Wallace, of Idaho, receives six thousand three hundred and ninety-seven dollars and sixty cents.

DUTCH FLAT ENQUIRER.

E. B. BOUST, : : : : EDITOR.

SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 25, 1864

Wanted.—A boy fourteen or fifteen years of age wanted at this office, to learn the printing business.—One "from the country" preferred.

FOURTH OF JULY.—We regret that our soldiers intend visiting Nevada on the fourth proximo; otherwise, it is likely our people would have been in favor of celebrating; as it is, the ladies have taken the matter in hand and will give a dinner at the Antelope Resturant on that day for the benefit of the Union Church, at which, we hope our citizens will be found. During the day there will be a presentation of a flag procured by the ladies, to the Union Sunday School Guard. We like this encouragement given by the citizens to the rising generation. It is proper that reverence and respect for the "old flag" which many in their blind fanaticism have lost sight of, should be taught our boys; and it is well for us that we instill into their minds that firm reliance and undeviating devotion to the principles bequeathed to us by the heroes of 1776. Palsied be the tongue that would poison their young hearts with sentiments that would cause them to neglect their duty to the Government of their fathers. In order that the members of our boy company may look back with pleasure and pride upon the natal day of our nation, our ladies will, through Miss Brown, attended by Misses representing the thirteen original States, present the boys with a beautiful Banner on the fourth, accompanied with appropriate ceremonies.

ROBBERY.—A most daring, impudent and outrageous robbery was committed by some thieves upon the residence of Mr. George A. Bradley, of this place, on the evening of Monday last. While the lady of Mr. Bradley was absent at a neighbors, the house was entered and all the jewelry and valuables that the scoundrels could lay their hands upon was taken away, after rummaging among the trunks, boxes, drawers and upsetting the bed, they regaled themselves with the pastry which they found; strewing it over the floor. The articles stolen consisted in silver tea spoons, belt buckle, gold chain and a gold locket, the latter of which contained the Daguerreotype likeness of the deceased daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, and for which the mother is exceedingly anxious to regain the possession of. If these thieves have a spark of human feeling about them they are requested to return the likeness of the dead child to the sorrowing and bereaved mother. We are requested to say that the likeness in the locket can be returned and no questions asked, or those having possession of it are desired to place it somewhere that the mother can get it.

WHERE are the Trustees of the town, and what are they about? A month ago or more, there was a petition circulated in town and signed by four-fifths of the property holders asking the Trustees to levy a tax to grade Main and Sacramento streets; the petition was handed to the Trustees for action, since which time there has been nothing heard from it. Exhume the petition, gentlemen, if you have buried it; you are expected to conform to the expressed will of the people, and it is time that something was done. The road from the Corporation line to the Donner Lake road at the east end of town is completed, and in order that those who have expended their money for this enterprise may profit by their work it is necessary that the streets leading through town should be graded and repaired, and this depends upon your action. It is hardly fair to cut the business of the west end of town from the travel, which will virtually be done unless some action is immediately taken in this matter.

ACKNOWLEDGING.—The Nevada Transcipt of a recent date says that men left that city to "commence operations towards the construction of the new road to Bear Valley. In about five weeks it will be ready for teams, and then we will have a road from Nevada to the Territory that will excel all others, Dutch Flat not excepted." We are glad our neighbor is willing to admit that before the Bear Valley road is completed the Dutch Flat road is the best. Whether the Nevada people will ever have as good a road as ours we seriously doubt, yet we have no objection to your making the effort, Mr. Transcript. We can afford to be generous now that we possess the best road.

PERSONAL.—We are glad to see that our esteemed friend the Rev. Mr. Willmot, stationed minister at Auburn, has been in town during the past week.—He looks in improved health and spirits.

SERVES HIM RIGHT.—That dirty secession rag, the Merced Banner, under the editorial charge of immense Steele, came near starving that distinguished personage, who has misrepresented the political sentiment of the people of that county, recently gratified the inhabitants of Snelling with advertising his office for sale. Upon noticing the fact, the Democratic Press gives him the following farewell broadside:

"The failure of the present editor of the Banner can only be attributed to his preeminent ability—he knew so much that he could not bring himself to acknowledge that any other Democrat in the county knew anything, and he punished every disagreement with himself by turning the offender over to the Abolitionists, until he read so many out of the party that he had no supporters left. He expects when he leaves to take the entire Democracy with him, but if his successor is a man of only moderate pretensions he has no great cause of alarm on that score."

☞ NOTICE our advertising columns! Every one of any business qualifications advertise in the ENQUIRER, knowing it to be the only medium thro' which they can reach all classes. Everybody reads the ENQUIRER; those who don't subscribe for it, steal it, in order to post themselves as to where the bargains can be had. Our people will find that those who advertise are men of liberality and discernment, who give better goods at a less price than those who do not advertise; a man that is too stingy to patronize the press will be too mean to give you the worth of your money if you trade with him. So look out.

GEN. E. B. HOPKINSON is our agent for Donner Lake and vicinity, and is authorized to solicit and receipt for subscriptions and advertisements for the ENQUIRER. All business entrusted to his care will be promptly attended to.

JUST ARRIVED.—Our old friend A. Friedman arrived in town from Nevada Territory, on Thursday last. He visits our town for his health, which has been bad for some time. He represents business in the Territory as dull, but says that the prospects for a reaction are favorable.

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION OF THE BANK OF CALIFORNIA.—The appended certificate of incorporation was filed in the County Clerk's office San Francisco. The formation of the new bank is the result of the dissolution of the banking firm of Donohoe, Rawlston & Co., which takes place on the first of July. Mr. Donohoe will continue in the banking business, in connection with Mr. Eugene Kelly, of New York, and will occupy the new house located at the corner of Montgomery and Sacramento streets.

Messrs. Ralston & Fretz, the other two partners, will continue the banking business at the old stand, corner of Washington and Battery streets, and associate with them the gentlemen whose names are attached to the certificate of incorporation, in the same business, under the title of "The Bank of California." The capital of this new banking enterprise is two million dollars of paid-up cash in United States gold coin.

We, the undersigned persons, do hereby certify that we have associated ourselves together, and desire to form a company for the purpose of engaging in the business of banking, and that we desire to incorporate the same under the provisions of an Act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled "an Act to provide for the formation of corporations for certain purposes," approved April 14th, in the year of our Lord 1853, and all acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, and we certify

First—That the corporate name of the Company shall be "The Bank of California;"

Second—That the objects for which the Company is formed are to engage in and carry on the business of banking to such extent, and in all such branches as may be legally done under the Constitution and laws of the State of California;

Third—That the amount of its capital stock shall be two millions of dollars, with the right to increase the same to five millions of dollars, and the time of its existence fifty years;

Fourth—That the number of shares of which the stock shall consist shall be twenty thousand, of one hundred dollars each;

Fifth—That there shall be eleven trustees, that is to say, D. O. Mills, William C. Ralston, J. B. Thomas, Louis McLane, O. F. Giffin, John O. Earl, Thomas Bell, Herman Michels, A. J. Pope, Wm. Norris, and James Whitney, Jr., who shall manage the concerns of the Company for the first three months;

Sixth—That the principal place of business of the Company is to be located at the city and county of San Francisco, in the State of California.

In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals this 12th day of May, 1864.

D. O. Mills, J. B. Thomas, O. F. Giffin, J. Whitney, Jr., Herman Michels, Moses Ellis, R. M. Jessup, Wm. E. Barron, H. F. Teschemacher, Louis McLane, A. C. Henry, William Alvord, W. C. Ralston, A. T. Lawton, John O. Earl, William Norris, A. B. McCreary, A. J. Pope, R. S. Fretz, Thomas Bell, George H. Howard, Samuel Knight, J. C. Wilmerding.—Exchange.

PLACERVILLE ROUTE.—The Nevada Transcript ventilates this route pretty thoroughly. The persistent efforts of those interested to impose this route on the people at the sacrifice of all other routes are about "played out," the people are becoming aware that there are better and shorter routes than the one by Placerville and are profiting by the knowledge. Half the money expended on the Placerville road would McAdamize the Dutch Flat road. We invite attention to the following:

"In a few days the passengers coming over the mountains by the Pioneer Company's Stages will leave Sacramento city at 4 o'clock in the morning and arrive here at ten o'clock the next night, and returning will leave this city at 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning and get to Sacramento in time for the San Francisco boat. The cause of this change is, that several new pieces of road have been completed, and the distance is materially shortened.—The railroad is now open from Sacramento to Latrobe, a distance of 26½ miles. From Latrobe to Placerville is 17 miles, from Placerville to Sportsman's Hall is 12 miles, from Sportsman's Hall to Bartum's Mill is 6 miles, from Bartum's Mill to Sugar Loaf is 13¼ miles over a fine new road, which has just been thrown open to the public, and from Sugar Loaf to Strawbery Talley the distance is 11 miles, from Strawberry to Yank's is 10 miles, thence to Friday's 10 more, and from Friday's to Carson is 22¾ miles over the road recently built. This route is much shorter than the old one and much better time can be made. There are at present six daily stages running from Fulsom to Placerville, four over the mountains to Placerville and Carson city, and two from Carson to Virginia making twelve coaches on the line.—This company employ six hundred head of horses and fifty men in all as agents clerks, drivers, hostlers, etc. There are ninety-three hotels on the route, with excellent accommodations."

The foregoing article was published June 16th, in the Virginia Union, and on the same day similar articles appeared in the Territorial Enterprise and Old Piute, a curious coincidence. The false statements in it, which were evidently intended to mislead the traveling public, requires some notice.

1st. There is not the least probability that any line of stages on the Placerville route will ever make the trip from Sacramento to Virginia city between 4 A. M. and 10 P. M., which is only 18 hours, when the regular time of the Pioneer line is 28 hours.

2d. It is impossible for any line to make the return trip between 9 A. M. and 2 P. M., in time for the San Francisco the same day.

3d. The Railroad is not open to Latrobe, as only one mile is laid beyond Folsom, and the parties have been enjoined from taking up the track on the Auburn Railroad, which is their sold reliance for iron to build the road to Latrobe.

4th. It is 22 miles instead of 17 from Latrobe to Placerville.

5th. That new road from Bartum's Mill to Sugar Loaf has not been opened to the public, and cannot possibly be completed for several months.

6th. The distance from Strawberry to Friday's is 22 instead of 20 miles. From Friday's to Carson it is 24¾ miles instead of 22¾.

In one of the articles, the distance from Latrobe to Virginia city is given at 117 miles, when the real distance is 137 miles—a difference of 20 miles.

The real distance is only 6 miles less than that to Fulsom, as the Railroad runs nearly south from Fulsom to Latrobe, instead of a direct line to Placerville. No time will therefore be gained by constructing the Railroad to Latrobe, as it will take the same time to run the 15 miles by Railroad as the 6 miles by stage. What troubles the Pioneer line is the fact, that ever since the stages over the Henness Pass route have connected with the Central Pacific Railroad, the latter have beat the Pioneer line to Virginia city from 3 to 4 hours regularly, and the public are beginning to find out which is the safest and quickest route. So the Pioneer has bolstered itself up by such reckless articles.

WHOLESALE DESTRUCTION OF TREES BY RABBITS.—The Contra Costa Gazette of June 11th says:

On Saturday night last, nearly one hundred thrifty fruit trees in the orchard of William Hook, about three miles from Pacheco, were girdled and killed by rabbits. Most of the trees were six years old, in fine condition and full of fruit. Hook has spared no labor nor expense in bringing his orchard to a high state of perfection, and a good part of four years care and painstaking has been rendered valueless by these depredators in a single night. Probably the drouth has drives the animals from their haunts in search of food. It would be well for other orchardists to be on their guard against similar visitations.

A SPECIAL POSTOFFICE AGENT.—We are told that the Mr. E. P. Crane who arrived by the last steamer from the East, comes to San Francisco on a special Government agency, his particular subject of inquiry being the management of the Postoffice. The well-grounded complaints of the people as to the lack of accommodation in that institution have reached Mr. Blair's ears, and he is determined to fathom the trouble in all its depth or shallowness. Mr. Crane being in delicate health, has gone to Napa for a few days, but will soon be back and at his investigations. Let the truth come out and we shall have a reform.—S. F. Bulletin.

The following is said to be the reply of Jeff. Davis to a letter written him by Lord Lyons, the British Minister at Washington, inclosing a letter from Lord Russell, in which it was stated the Confederate Government, (Jeff. Davis) should buy no more rams from the citizens of the British Government, or procue the building of any:

RICHMOND (Va.), C. S. A., April 6, 1864.

To the Right Hon. Lord Lyons, C. B., etc., H. B. M.'s Minister to the Government of the United States:

MY LORD; I have been instructed by the President to acknowledge the receipt of a dispatch from your Lordship, inclosing a copy of a portion of a dispatch from Earl Russel, H. B. M.' Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, purporting to be a "formal protest and remonstrance of her Majesty's Government against the efforts of the authorities of the so-called Confederate States to build war vessels within her Majesty's dominions, to be employed against the Government of the United States."

The President desires me to say to your lordship that while he is not unwilling to waive, in existing circumstances, the transmission of such a document through other than the usual and proper channel, it would be inconsistent with the dignity of the position he fills, as Chief Ma istrate of a nation comprising a population of more than twelve millions, occupying a territory many times larger than the United Kingdom, and possessing resources unsurpassed by those of any other country on the face of the globe, to allow the attempt of Earl Russell to ignore the actual existence of the Confederate States, and to contumeliously style them "so-called," to pass without a protest and a remonstrance. The President, therefore, does protest and remonstrate against this studied insult, and he instructs me to say that in future any document in which it may be repeated will be returned unanswered and unnoticed.

With respect to the subject of the extract from Earl Russell's speech the Pregident desires me to state that the plea of neutrality which is used to sustain the sinister course of her Majesty's present Government against the Government of the Confederate States is so clearly contradicted by their actions that it is regarded by the world—not even excepting the United States—as a mere cover for actual hostility, and the President cannot but feel that this a just view of it. Were, indeed, her Majesty's Government sincere in a desire and determined to maintain neutrality, the President could not but feel that they would neither be just nor gallant to allow the subjugation of a nation like the Confederate States by such a barbarous, despotic race as are now attempting it. He cannot but feel, with the history and traditions of the Anglo-Saxon race before him, that under a Government faithfully representing the people of Great Britain the whole weight and power of that nation would be unhesitatingly thrown into the scale in favor of the principles of free Government on which these States were originally formed, and for which alone the Confederate States are now struggling. He can not but feel that, with such a Government, and with the plea of neutrality urged upon the people as it now is, no such pitiful spectacle could be witnessed as is now manifested by her Majesty's present Government in the persistent persecution of the Confederate States, at the beck and bidding of officers of the United States, while a Prime Minister mocks and insults the intelligence of a House of Commons and of the world, by excusing the permission to allow British subjects to go to the United States to fight against us, by the paltry subterfuge that it was the great demand for labor and the high rate of wages that were taking them thither. He cannot but feel that a neutrality most cunningly, audaciously, fawingly and insolently sought and urged; begged and demanded by one belligerent and repudiated by the other, must be seen by all impartial men to be a mere pretext for aiding the cause of one at the expense of the other, while pretending to be impartial, to be, in short, but a cover for a treacherous, malignant hostility.

As for the specious argument on the subject of the rams, advanced by Earl Russell, the President desires me to state that he is content to leave the world and history to pronounce judgment upon this attempt to heap injury upon insult by declaring that her Majesty's Government and law officers are satisfied of the questions involved, while those questions are still before the highest legal tribunal of the kingdom, composed of members of the Government and the highest law officers of the Crown, for their decision. The President himself will not condescend to notice them.

I have the honor to be your Lordship's obedient, humble servant,

B. N. HARRISON, Private Secretary.

PARCHMENT.—Parchment is made of skins sheep and lambs, though that kind which is used for the head of drums is said to be made of goatskins. Vellum is a finer, and smoother, white kind of parchment, made of the skin of young calves. The mode of preparation is first to take off the hair or wool, then to steep the skin in lime, and afterwards stretch it very firmly on a wooden frame. When thus fixed, it is scraped with a blunt iron tool, wetted and rubbed with chalk and pumice stone, and these scrapings and rubbings are repeated on each side of the skin till it is fit for use. Parchment was employed in very ancient times, and it is curious that from the seventh to the tenth century, it was beautiful, white and good, but that in later times a very inferior dirty-looking kind of parchment came into use, which has the appearance of being much older than the good. The reason for this is supposed to be, that the writers in these latter centuries used to prepare their own parchment while at an earlier date it was a curious art, only possessed by the manufacturers. Parchment was sometimes so rare and scarce, that great numbers of the older manuscripts were erased with pumice stone, or the ink washed out by some chemical substance, in order that they might be used again for writing upon.

AMERICAN EXCHANGE,

SANSOME STREET,

Opposite the American Theater,

San Francisco.

S. H. SEYMOUR,.....Proprietor.

THE UNDERSIGNED, LONG CONNECTED with the establishment as Book-keeper, begs leave respectfully to inform the old patrons of the house, and the public generally, that he has leased from Mr. Bailey Sargent, which will in future be entirely under his management and control, and where he will be pleased to see his old friends and the traveling public. He flatters himself that his experience in the business, and his long acquaintance with the people of California, will be a guarantee that no one will leave his house dissatisfied, and he pledges himself to spare no pains or expense in providing every means for the comfort and satisfaction of his guests.

THIS MAGNIFICENT ESTABLISHMENT,

THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE is so well known to the people of California, that it seems almost unnecessary to say anything in praise, either of the building or its location. The Proprietor will only remark that it is inferior to no house in the State in all the requirements of a FIRST CLASS HOTEL, being in a central location and easy of access from all parts of the city. The ROOMS are large and WELL VENTILATED, and furnished with Spring Mattresses. Water has been introduced into all part of the house.

BATH ROOMS on the premises for the convenience of families.

Two Omnibuses attached to the Hotel to convey passengers to and from the steamers.
